

Go Ahead, See My Clay

THE SECOND annual pottery festival, now known as the Day to See Clay, happened in a hopping Jeffersonville this past weekend. Above, potter Jill Wiener of Earth Girl Pottery, enjoys the early fall day and the crowds the festival drew to Main Street. She was one of a dozen denizens of clay who showed and sold wares at the Presbyterian Church lot, next to the post office. Other exhibiting potters included Carolyn Duke, Ayla Maloney (Honey Hill Pottery), Terry Velardi, Barbara Brown, Cecily Fortescue, Laura Orvieto, Anne & Ed Nocera, Chris Parrow, Madeline Stillwell and Kathy Jeffers and Jill Wiener. In addition to the pottery festival, TLC television got into heavy television-making mode downtown and photojournalists from the Eddie Adams workshop were shooting photos all around town, making it a day to film clay as well as see it. BARBARA GREFF PHOTO